Identifying the factors that predict readmissions to the intensive care unit after discharge. To identify the independent predictors of 30-day readmission following discharge from an intensive care unit (ICU). Retrospective cohort study. A 20-bed medical ICU at a community-based university hospital. A total of 1371 consecutive patients who survived to discharge from an ICU between January 1, 2003 and December 31, 2006. None. Age, sex, pre-ICU hospital stay, length of ICU stay, admission diagnosis, mechanical ventilation time, requirement for vasoactive agents, Acute Physiology and Chronic Health Evaluation (APACHE) II score on ICU admission, and length of ICU stay were considered as independent variables. A total of 100 patients (7.4%) were readmitted within 30 days of discharge. A multivariate logistic regression model revealed length of ICU stay, vasoactive agents, and APACHE II score on ICU admission as independent predictors of readmission. Length of ICU stay of at least 10 days (adjusted odds ratio, 7.68; 95% confidence interval, 2.95-19.72), vasoactive agents (adjusted odds ratio, 6.88; 95% confidence interval, 3.54-13.37), and APACHE II score on ICU admission of at least 13 (adjusted odds ratio, 2.29; 95% confidence interval, 1.15-4.58)
