A rabbit antiserum, B20, raised against a highly purified human erythropoietin (Ep) has been raised to investigate the development of antibodies to Ep in the Lewis rat following continuous exposure to Ep. The titre of Ep-anti-Ep antibodies was not elevated until the 5th week of exposure to the purified hormone, rising to maximal levels between the 7th and 20th week of exposure. In rats maintained on low-dose (50 mU/kg) s.c. therapy of beta-glucan, no alteration was observed in the development of antibodies compared to those of control groups.Latest Developments in COVID-19 The Chinese authorities reported today (28 February 2020) that the number of new confirmed cases of coronavirus (COVID-19) now stands at 75,886, with more than 3,000 deaths. The United States on 27 February 2020 reported 37 new cases of the coronavirus, with 20 deaths. Finally, it is estimated that 75,000 persons, including 12,000 healthcare workers and 12,000 volunteers, died from the outbreak of coronavirus pneumonia on the mainland of China in the first few months of 2020. These figures represent the worst threat to mankind since the Spanish flu in 1918, which killed between 50 and 100 million people. The pandemic will likely have long-term effects on public health and politics, as has been the case with previous epidemics. During the 2014 to 2015 Ebola outbreak in West Africa, which resulted in 11,310 deaths, the three worst-affected countries – Guinea, Sierra Leone and Liberia – were never completely restored to their pre-Ebola health conditions. In Wuhan, too, the situation was worsening. The official Chinese figures The World Health Organisation has the official statistics from China and on the official site of the World Health Organisation. In mid-January 2020, there were 19,098 cases of COVID-19, with 806 deaths. The numbers were as follows. – 20 February 2020:
