CHENNAI: Union Home Minister Amit Shah on Sunday launched a scathing attack on Congress president Rahul Gandhi, accusing him of leading the party along with “shameless leaders”. Shah said, “A hectic fever of corruption has hit the Congress party”. With the message sent in his toughest attack on any opposition leader so far, Shah went on to say that the party’s defeat in the recent Lok Sabha polls was partly due to corruption. He even went as far as saying that if the opposition comes to power, “people will throw the country into anarchy”. Read more: Rahul, Nitish Kumar, Kapil Sibal & Arvind Kejriwal Asserting that in politics, as in cricket, “it is not about power but whose power is more,” Shah said a “corrupt Congress led by Rahul Gandhi is now ready to face all the problems of this country”. Taking a dig at Rahul and his aide Sam Pitroda, the BJP president said the former may not have done much, but had “a huge heart”. Shah claimed Pitroda, who had joined the Congress after parting ways with the Bharatiya Janata Party, was planning to use the party’s government formation as “the pretext to blow his own trumpet”. Speaking on the current political scenario, Shah said the Congress has played a masterstroke by keeping in the “background” all those who have “committed crimes” and has “positioned them to take revenge”. Shah alleged that corruption is practised by the Congress as a “craft”, the party finances are “stolen”, the Congress leaders are involved in “black money”, whereas former finance minister P Chidambaram had to “turn a ‘policeman’ in the name of the Indian citizens”. This invention is directed to improved article cleaning apparatus of the type wherein articles to be cleaned are transported on a machine to be contacted by various cleaning fluid, and, more particularly, to an improved, high-speed water processing machine and method wherein the articles to be cleaned are continuously conveyed on the machine to continuously receive cleaning fluid. As will be appreciated, there are a wide variety of articles, such as, for example, printed circuit boards, industrial parts, electronic components, automotive parts, and the like, which must be cleaned prior to utilization. Such articles must, of course, be cleaned to remove contaminants therefrom, such as, for example, adhesive residue, oils, greases, and the like. The type of contaminants and their removal are dependent upon the manner of cleaning, for example, ultrasonic cleaning, hot deionized water cleaning, etc. Additionally, the articles are often provided with coatings thereon, which must be removed. Because of the wide variety of articles to be cleaned, and the type of cleaning which is to be accomplished, there is a wide variety of cleaning machines. Typically, each type of cleaning requires a specific type of cleaning solution and the cleaning solution must be heated to provide the necessary energy to remove contaminant materials from the articles to be cleaned. The articles are usually cleaned in racks, where the racks are not quite completely filled, so that the remaining articles present in the rack are spaced apart from each other. In order to effectively clean the articles, they must be moved between various processing stations, such as, for example, between a cleaning station, wherein the article to be cleaned is in contact with the cleaning solution, and a rinsing station, wherein the article is removed from the cleaning solution and cleaned in a rinsing solution. Thus, it will be appreciated that there is a continuous and high speed need for processing machines, such as, for example, machines for cleaning printed circuit boards, which will not only effectively clean the articles to be cleaned, but will also clean the articles in a very high-speed manner. Such need exists, for example, in the semiconductor industry. However, when the articles are conveyed in a given direction, for example, horizontally, it has been a problem to efficiently convey the articles between the various cleaning stations. Additionally, it has been a problem to supply the cleaning solution to the articles to be cleaned, while at the same time, delivering the cleaning solution to the cleaning stations. Still further, it has been a problem to clean
