It can save these commands to a file or to a spreadsheet. You can then use the commands to automate tasks. You can import text from any source, such as Word, Excel, Powerpoint, a browser, a spreadsheet, an online dictionary, or anything else that can produce text. You can apply text to graphics, music, pictures, sound, etc. You can change fonts and sizes, adjust colors, make pictures transparent, turn pictures into posters, change pictures into line drawings, or make pictures into text. You can duplicate pictures, move them around, change their contrast, colorize them, add special effects, make an animated slideshow, or print them. You can also convert files into a different format. The format can be a different picture type, like JPEG, GIF, TIFF, PCD, BMP, or even a different size of the same type, like a 640 x 480 picture of a 1024 x 768 picture, or an 8-bit picture of a 16-bit picture. You can even combine picture formats, like a JPEG with an animated GIF. Working time: When you start the application, you must choose a folder and a file name. You can choose a file name to load or record. While you are loading or recording, the file name is used. You can select a custom file name or file type. When the job is finished, you can save the file or load a file into the clipboard, and paste it to another application. The commands used to open the file can be automatically copied. If you are used to using the command line, you can type commands into a text field. There is an autocomplete feature that lets you type a few letters and it will suggest more complete commands that you can use. You can adjust the autocomplete and drag and drop fields. You can resize the window to your preferences. You can select a command and then immediately type into the command line. You can also click and drag to copy and paste text into the command line.
