6 essential Photoshop brushes from 'humble' Photoshop Elements creators Elements has plenty of drawing and vector editing tools, and so let's take a look at some of the tools it offers. We know that Photoshop Elements is an alternative to Photoshop, but it doesn't mean that you can't do anything in it you can do in Photoshop. In fact, Elements offers most of the features of the more professional version. As a matter of fact, Photoshop Elements comes with a drawing app (Figma) as an essential tool (the drawing app isn't available in the full version). 6 essential Photoshop brushes In the post, you'll find some of the best illustrations of Photoshop Elements, what you can and can't do with it, and finally some of the best Photoshop brushes created by users and their PSD files. Let's have a look. In this post, you'll find brushes not only created by Adobe designers but also by designers from other sectors. 1. Vectorial selection brushes for Digital Foundry's Lab Test [Finger's] [M-Pencil] Photoshop [Elements] Source There is something that we really enjoy: in any screenshot, we try to find people who created the screenshot. Sometimes, we think that the screenshot was created by the person who shot it, but of course it's most of the times a nice picture from someone else. Finger has been working on creating some amazing screenshots, and this time they created a very unique hybrid of a screenshot. The graphic designer uses vectorial selection and transforms the screenshot to take advantage of the rich vector selection tools. Finger's screenshot can be found at Unsplash. 2. Cactus & Brushbrush Brushes – Brush [Cactus] [Brush] Photoshop [Elements] Having a thick brush combined with a simple shape is something you can't achieve without the right Photoshop brushes. Cactus is here to offer you a bunch of these brushes. You'll find 20–90-pixel brushes, but you should check out the 100-pixel brushes with a thick brush. Cactus has been creating great Photoshop brushes for quite a long time, and you can find the Cactus Brushes on his website. 3. An illustrator work in Photoshop 388ed7b0c7

It's called the "Darth Vader Files" – and it was generated by creating a large archival dataset of archive documents to which copyright is secured. The data covers a vast swath of anti-Semitic material, including Holocaust denial, racial slurs, malevolent incitement to violence, antisemitism, and Holocaust denial – everything that Adolf Hitler, Joseph Goebbels and other leaders in the Nazi party sought to remove from German society. The "Darth Vader Files" attempt to map the archives with a consistent coding system. The project, led by researchers at Israel's Computer Science and Applied Mathematics Department of the Technion – Israel Institute of Technology, is part of a broader body of work, including the Anti-Defamation League (ADL) database, comparing anti-Semitic and other forms of hatred. The project received funding from the European Union's Horizon 2020 research and innovation programme. Dr. Meital Carmeli, lead researcher and director of the Cyber, Media and Censorship Lab at the Technion, said: "While we may believe that Holocaust denial and anti-Semitism have vanished from the world, it turns out we are wrong. The research allows us to prove that hate speech really still exists and is very much alive. "There is a deep and powerful reservoir of hatred against the Jewish people that must be stopped. It is also important that the documented hatred we uncover will make international law in this area so that we can recognize and deal with issues of hate and discrimination," added Prof. Carmeli. "The final outcome of the project will be a new and improved analysis tool for the open-source visualization and analysis of large data sets in humanities and social sciences." My script file is in the same folder as the HTML file. This is the only way I found of loading a local script file with jQuery.getScript. Does anyone know a solution, or am I just trying to use a poor function? jQuery(document).ready(function() { jQuery("#page1").getScript('/2/1/11/1.js'); }); A: I think you must load

MGM Resorts International, the parent company of MGM Grand Hotel & Casino, sold its interest in Teamsters Local 42 to the union. MGM Resorts International, the parent company of MGM Grand Hotel & Casino, sold its interest in Teamsters Local 42 to the union. The sale took place just before midnight. The shutdown of the casino in January left thousands of workers without paychecks and the union has been seeking to help them. The casino's 10,000 workers are represented by Local 42, which is one of the smaller of the union's labor groups. But it will be bigger within the next few months. Management has agreed to sell a majority of the company. The union must still get control of a large-scale, multi-employer pension plan, but it is expected to assume control before the end of the year. The head of the union, Greg Roule, said the sale was a big victory. "It's a great day for us," he said. "We've had a commitment from MGM to retain all our bargaining rights. We've also had commitment that we won't be forced to accept any third-party deal" to help resolve the pension issue. MGM Resorts International, which owns the casino on the Las Vegas Strip, said it had an agreement to sell its interest to Local 42, which operates the casino, for $36 million. The casino has been closed since January, when the company said it had lost $60 million. "As a result of this sale, the terms of which are subject to a court confirmation hearing, the employees in the bargaining unit will now have control of their own union," the company said in a statement. "This transfer of control is our company's commitment to the union and its members and we look forward to working with them going forward," the statement said. Local 42 spokesman David Perlo said the sale was finished, but the union has not yet learned all the details. He said it was the largest sale of a union by a casino operator to a labor union. In a separate development, Gov. Jim Gibbons, who successfully fought to shut down the casino, said in a statement that he was pleased with the news. "This is a move I've long fought for," he said. "As they
