A common variant, T3111C (rs1801260) of the Clock gene has been associated with sleep disturbances in young adults and subsequently with increased risk of hypertension and hyperlipidemia. Previous studies have reported that the CLOCK gene polymorphism is associated with Alzheimer's disease (AD), but there has been no report in Asian populations. To evaluate the relationship between the CLOCK gene polymorphism and AD in the Korean population, a total of 315 AD patients and 200 healthy controls were recruited. Genotyping was performed by the polymerase chain reaction-restriction fragment length polymorphism method. The TT genotype and T allele of the CLOCK rs1801260 polymorphism were significantly associated with an increased risk of AD in the Korean population, with a combined odds ratio of 3.68 (95% confidence interval, 1.62-8.35) in the dominant model. In addition, a positive association was found between the CLOCK rs1801260 genotype and clinical severity of AD. In conclusion, the CLOCK rs1801260 polymorphism is associated with AD and may be an independent risk factor for AD in the Korean population.Breast cancer prognostic biomarkers (BPI) perform better than Her2/neu and Ki67 in predicting patient survival.
