Why is the universal constant of acceleration, $a$, approximately $2.99792458\times10^{ -10 $$ \;\mathrm{m/s^2}$? A: Because it's the constant speed of light in free space. While it's possible to calculate the exact value for electromagnetic fields confined to something (such as a dielectric or conductive material) it doesn't make sense to do so to calculate the speed of light in any other environment, because there are no fields in empty space. As it turns out it doesn't matter if there are fields or not - the speed of light is still $c$ e79caf774b

I tried the snap command and get error saying SQLSnapShot Install Package name Id Error Msg what is this? It seems there is another package called sqlsnapshot A: That file is part of the SQL Server Management Studio (SSMS) installer. However, the package, it's installing, is SQLSnapshot .exe. On a side note, it seems like the nomenclature for the SQL Server Management Studio installs has changed. The sys file appears to have the old naming convention. If you want to remove the package, you need to uninstall the SSMS installer first. Q: bind not working while login in ubuntu 13.04 I have installed ubuntu 13.04 64bit over my machine and everything working fine, but the problem I am facing is I am unable to bind openIdap correctly, while I am able to bind it while login, but that is not the way I wanted.
