A: This is because the RTF source code differs from the fount version that is present on your PC. If you type `grep -inR"version="7.0.0.104"" src/Main/res/values/strings.xml` you will find that the string `version="7.0.0.104"` is only present in the RTF version. This means that the rest of the strings.xml has a different version ID to match, and hence your program does not compile because of the differences.

Description Tweet Hi there, This update is designed to help Android users not have to sit and grind through logs to create a new password, with this app, no more data on the device needs to be open for the app to function, this helps to keep all of the user's data private. Just tap on the "Tweet Password" button in the app, this will open the tweet Password window, just type in your name and tap send and have a password created for you (this does not save it for you, please log back in to get to it).
