Cirque du Brawlee is a game for 1-4 players where you will rise to the top as the greatest circus clown in all of Zork. Using the six tools at your disposal, you'll jump from trapeze to trapeze and from human to human, jumping their carcasses to confuse your opponents and win the day! In the end, there is only one victor: You! - - - - -
- - - - - Features: - Players can switch positions during a match. - You can choose from four different circus characters. Each character has their own special abilities, balance, and cosmetic options. (If you choose to play using a female version of any of the characters, the female version will be a copy of the original, with the same abilities and perks.) - Draw enemy cards by uncovering cards or through interaction with the environment. - Use whatever cards you draw to manipulate the circus scene around you. - Cards represent your attack and your defensive strength. Play cards to use your skills at the correct time, or save cards to defend yourself in the heat of battle! - Use the crowd to your advantage, ensuring that you are drawn into battle while depriving your opponents of the crowd's mob mentality. - Obtaining each circus card unlocks new abilities for your circus. - Ability cards and circus cards represent the different elements of the circus. Every circus card is randomized and has a set starting attribute, health, and a cost for its use. You can modify a circus card based on its starting attribute and it's starting life total. - Every circus card is a unique object with its own special properties and abilities. - You can play with up to four arcade boards at once, each with 4 players. - There are 52 circus cards. Players can use 2-9 of the cards, giving them special effects and effects for the game. - Cards will appear on the field at random, but you can change the number of cards played at any time. - There are 12 circus

Award for Best Picture at the 1st Canadian Screen Awards on April 21, 2011, in which it won the category. Plot In June 2008, the summer heat in the summer of 2009, four small groups of high school classmates living around Esterley Bay, Ontario, meet at each other's houses for a day of mucking around, drinking, talking and making plans for their futures. Hot on the heels of himself coming out and away from this summer, a nineteen-year-old high school dropout, Anton (played by James Duval), drops by to inform the four about a motorcycle ride five years earlier where a nineteen-year-old Anton's mutual friend, Dan, who was a practicing doctor, went fishing in early June 2008, left them to take a statement from another man, Kyle, who nearly killed an innocent bystander with his car and fled. Along with Dan being absent in a fatal accident after an episode of apparent psychological breakdown the night before with other group members, the four try to cope with the loss with pep talks, insults and some fistfights while getting drunk for a few hours. On their way back home, Kyle, who is one of their group, stops the pick-up truck he had been driving, lays down his motorcycle, and starts walking. His friends, Dan's friends,

Q: WPF Grid Row Visibility Converter Binding The data we receive from the server is invalid for about half of the rows in my WPF table. These rows are simply invalid and we do not need to display them. I would like to bind to an IValueConverter and return the Visibility.Hidden value if the value supplied in the IValueConverter is less than 0.5, otherwise return Visibility.Visible. I understand the conversion back and forth with Boolean, but I have been unable to get the Visibility.Hidden binding to return the correct value. My xaml:
