Based on the same physics engine as our other car games, the goal is to drift or power slide your car around the corners of the track with unprecedented control. The cars are the same as the cars included in the Drift Test Drive Pack, 4S Sedan and 3S Coupe, all from Germany. In this series, everything is made in-house, including the tracks, the racing game logic and also the effects and ambient music. The sound of the engine includes 10 custom engine sounds, including the stock engine, a tuned engine, a full synthetic sound, a supercharged engine and an engine with an exhaust leak. The exhaust leak is a stock 2013 BMW 4S engine with a slot cut in the exhaust pipe, where the exhaust now flows out of the car and then back through the pipe. As it stands, this game not only successfully sums up the field, it also faithfully recreates the retro point and click atmosphere and gameplay, while being particularly funny at the same time, which is really all you can ask for here 4/5 Gizorama Comedy Quest sounds and looks exactly like the games I imagined would appear after reading the scratchware manifesto. Rock Paper Shotgun Gameplay and Interface comedy Quest As it stands, this game not only successfully sums up the field, it also faithfully recreates the retro point and click atmosphere and gameplay, while being particularly funny at the same time, which is really all you can ask for here 4/5 Gizorama! I must admit that I was a bit nervous when I saw this on Kickstarter. I have never been a huge fan of crowdsourcing, and my knowledge of independent development comes solely from Garry's Mod. However, in a similar vein to that game, I found myself laughing my way through what I thought at first was just a crudely animated game. I would have liked to have seen more people working on this game before I backed it - perhaps that would have made me reconsider. In the end I came away pleasantly surprised, and would definitely consider donating to the developers if they ever get around to putting out a full game. I'm now looking forward to seeing what happens to the idea after the crowd is no longer allowed to crowd-source. 4/5 Gamebreaker.org Comedy Quest, as it stands, is such a perfect conversion of the Lucasarts games of yore that it has to be accepted as the apex of the genre. More than that, it actually makes sense as an expansion of the Lucasarts concepts and is such a worthy successor to the other more pedestrian attempts. Perfectly clean, funny and reminiscent, if not a perfect clone, then certainly, some first-rate fill. 'It's about time' if you ask me! 4/5 Gaming Hive Why has nobody made a Lucasarts game with the same level of detail as this? Seriously. 4/5 Scrap Blast Mushi Comedy Quest, as it stands, is such a perfect conversion of the Lucasarts games of yore that it has to be accepted as the apex of the genre. wrote: You cannot have an Hermit when you're in the Wilderness. You need some kind of supplies to keep you going. You shouldn't be too concerned about numbers though, as trying to improve ANYTHING can be dangerous. That's not true at all. You can keep a 9 person settlement going for quite some time. Just need to be more careful of Weasels or wolves. A Man day could drop from more than a couple of people getting lost or hurt/killed. You should have a couple of animals or plants in the settlement as well. The right kind of animals can dispel snakes and keep insects at bay or grow different plants and herbs that can be useful for healing or cooking. Any animal that is pack/herding and represents long term sustainability is the perfect settler animal. Chickens/Koi are the most common, no egg, no chicken, but they quickly reproduce and need no food or water for a long time. Might make you critters unhappy if it's a feral animal that wanders onto your house though Last edited by Niw on May 24th 2018, 4:10 pm; edited 1 time in total Niw wrote: T-shirts are funny stuff, what with girls liking them and being a godsend to young'uns. Whoever made the t-shirt "Slave Laborer" was aiming for the top. -Niw It was the aristocracy who made the t-shirt, Niw. The portrait on the t-shirt shows someone who is just a step above the L2/L3/L4 master of the nearest labour camp, and was a veteran of the slave labors so they had come to understand the mentality of that grade even better than the masters. For value of themselves a master would give an L2/L3/L4 a 50CC t-shirt to wear in their case. This is the reason why it made the top. There were a couple of principles that I had brought to the table and here they are: An L1 slave laborer is tasked to hand carry supplies to a settlement, this also involves building walls, and laying roads. Their reward is food - and water if the person is in the wilderness.* A settlement must preferably have the basic living/utilities items for the population.* Any animals in the settlement should be kept relevant for the settlement and be self sustaining and no more than 4 at any time
