Buchenland
Buchenland is a town in the district of Amberg-Sulzbach, Bavaria, Germany. It is situated in a valley near the river Amper. History The area of Buchenland was first mentioned in 772 A.D., but has been populated since the late Bronze Age. The town originated in the modern-day district of Südchwang in the Middle Ages. Under the reign of the Wittelsbach dynasty it was granted city status. After some fires it became part of Bavaria in 1920 and then fell under Amberg's administration in 1937.

Today, the town is noted as a well-preserved example of a former rural town, with many historical buildings.
Culture Architecture Buchenland is one of Bavaria's youngest and best preserved villages.
Several buildings in the area are older than the foundation of the town. The most notable is the Neumarkt, an oak-built Romanesque church, which was built in the 12th century. Other historical buildings include the town hall, a parish church, a hospital, a windmill, an old graveyard, a prison, the old village school, and the well-preserved old village church. Church of Saints Peter and Paul The Church of Saints Peter and Paul was built in 1870. It is a single nave, with Gothic Revival elements and
