Wednesday, March 20, 2015 Around 74% of Britons are now aware of the new General Data Protection Regulation, despite the fact it will not be enacted until May 2018. The survey, carried out by Enders Analysis, polled 2,036 adults in December last year to discover which of the UK's members of parliament (MPs) and peers were the most familiar with the new rules that will replace the Data Protection Act 1998. This is the first time the EU has attempted to craft a piece of legislation that unites the 27 member states. The results showed that the Welsh MPs led the way, with 93 per cent of Welsh respondents saying they were familiar with the new regulations. However, 19 per cent of those living in Scotland, 14 per cent in Northern Ireland, and 11 per cent in England claimed they were not aware of the new rules. Members of the House of Lords were also the most likely to be aware of the new regulation. 69 per cent said they knew of it, closely followed by MPs at 64 per cent. Gavin St Pier, Trade and Industry Minister, said: "The new General Data Protection Regulation will make a massive difference to how we collect and use personal data. It will make sure that our online behaviour is respected and can't be used against us. "It will make sure companies act fairly, considerate of the privacy of individuals, and respect the rules. By the time we are settled under the new rules it is fair to say that I think most organisations will be more than happy with the new approach." The most popular topic of conversation, however, was not the new regulations but the fact that 2,006 people were polled. It is the second year that Enders Analysis has produced a poll on data protection, and the first time that phone polling has been used. The research also showed that 86 per cent of respondents have heard about Big Brother Watch, the campaign group that is campaigning against the controversial information and communication

What's New in the Camera Raw Photoshop 2020 Download?

Pizzazz (TV series) Pizzazz (; literally: Racing Lady) was a South Korean variety show that aired on SBS from June 1, 2007 to August 22, 2007. It was the first variety show to be broadcast during the 2006 FIFA World Cup, and was the tenth show broadcast by the SBS network in 2007. Production The program was announced on March 9, 2007. Pizzazz began with a concept show titled 'Glory 2 Glory' which aired on May 21, 2007. Rules Puzzles The participants had to solve a "puzzle" without a previously prepared solution. The solutions are collectively displayed at the end, along with a cryptic clue from a guest. Each participant had to choose the correct solution at least 90% of the time. If the majority of correct solutions were incorrect, the contestant would be eliminated. The solution to the puzzle was hidden in the prizes the participants received after they solved the puzzle. Relevance to challenges If a contestant failed the challenge, he or she had to play the puzzle to find the solution. If they failed to solve the puzzle, their team of three contestants would lose; and also lose the corresponding prize. Specializes The comedians who specialized in "remake, parody, and revamp" type of challenges. These include: The "Birthday Wars" where the participants would be given a theme. They would then need to come up with a film's plot, its theme song and its ending, all within 30 minutes. The "Pizza Wars" featured a party themed challenge in which the participants had to make a commercial based on one of the themes associated with the theme of the party such as pizza, donut, coffee, and Starbucks etc. Round 1: Equals 3 The contestants have to work together. If the contestants cannot reach an agreement, the game ends as a draw. The winner is the one who can make the food first. The contestants who played the first round is a part of the next round. Round 2: Adaptation The contestants have to adapt a story into their own play. The story must be already written and ready. The players who has win both previous rounds will be played in this round. Round 3: Final All the contestants are given two minutes and are not allowed to use any of the equipment in the studio. The one who can eat 20 pizzas in the most time will win
